SENTA FOULKES RESEARCH AWARD 2021 FOR ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTION OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TO MEDICINE

Description and guidelines for application

In May 1987, during his visit to Israel, the late Dr. Ernest Foulkes, Chairman of the Foulkes Foundation for the encouragement and promotion of medical research among young scientists, announced a new program of the Foulkes Foundation Research Awards.

Once in three years, the Foundation presents two awards of up to £2,500 each, one in England – The Ernest Foulkes Prize – and the other in Israel – the Senta Foulkes Award.

Eligible for this special recognition are recipients of the Foulkes Awards, who have shown excellence in their research and their academic achievements.

The Foulkes Family, which is generously supporting this program, is convinced that by encouraging promising young scientists to engage in medical research, they are contributing both to the field of Medicine and to humanity at large.

The next award for excellence in research will be granted in 2021.

Priority will be given to doctors who have remained actively involved in medical practice.

The applicant should describe the nature of these activities in her/his application.

Applicants should be at least 3 years past approval of their PhD and MD degrees (the latter of the two) at the time of submission.

Foulkes Fellows in Israel are welcome to send their applications by March 15, 2021.

The applications should be prepared in English and include the following:

1. Curriculum Vita and list of publications. (please include the years of your Foulkes fellowship)
